

GUIDANCE MEMORANDUM

Local Enforcement of Federal Immigration Law: Legal Guidance for Maryland State and Local Law Enforcement Officials

DECEMBER 2018

INTRODUCTION

For some time now, questions have arisen about the extent to which State and local law enforcement officials may, or are required to, assist U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”) and the Customs and Border Protection (“CBP”) officials with the enforcement of federal immigration law. In August 2014, our Office issued advice on the “ICE detainers” issued by federal immigration officials when they seek custody of suspected removable aliens.¹ In that letter, our Office concluded that (a) compliance with ICE detainers is voluntary, and (b) State and local law enforcement officials are potentially exposed to liability if they hold someone beyond his or her State-law release date without a judicial warrant or probable cause that the detainee has committed a crime.²

In light of recent federal measures designed to restrict immigration and intensify the enforcement of federal immigration laws, we are now updating and supplementing our 2014 guidance. The purpose of this new guidance is to describe for Maryland State and local governments the current legal landscape governing the participation of law enforcement officials in immigration enforcement, and to help those officials make decisions about how to engage with federal immigration officers.

This guidance reaches several legal conclusions for State and local law enforcement agencies (“LEAs”) to consider as they interact with federal immigration law and officials:

1. LEAs face potential liability exposure if they seek to enforce federal immigration laws, particularly if they do so outside the context of a federal cooperation agreement under 8 U.S.C. § 1357(g)(1).
2. LEAs must absorb all costs associated with federal cooperation agreements under 8 U.S.C. § 1357(g)(1). The federal government does not provide reimbursement for these agreements, and the agreements may increase the risk of unconstitutional profiling.

² This guidance applies equally to all non-federal law enforcement officers and agencies, whether they operate at the municipal, county, or state level. To distinguish those officers from federal immigration officers, we will sometimes refer to them together as “local” officials, but at other times we will refer to both State and local entities. These differences in nomenclature are not intended to have substantive effect.

3. LEAs face potential liability exposure if they honor ICE or CBP detainer requests unless the request is accompanied by a judicial warrant or supported by information providing probable cause that the subject of the detainer has committed a crime.

4. State and local officers may not be prohibited from sharing information about a detainee's citizenship or immigration status with federal immigration officials, but they are not required to do so either.

5. As an overriding principle, the government bears the burden of proving that the detention of someone beyond the person's State-law release date does not violate the Fourth Amendment and its Maryland counterpart.

AUTHORITIES GOVERNING LOCAL PARTICIPATION IN THE ENFORCEMENT OF FEDERAL IMMIGRATION LAWS

A. The Tenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution

The Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution³ limits the federal government's ability to mandate particular action by states and localities, including in the area of federal immigration law enforcement and investigations. The federal government cannot "compel the States to enact or administer a federal regulatory program," or compel state employees to participate in the administration of a federally enacted regulatory scheme.⁴ The anti-commandeering restrictions of the Tenth Amendment extend not only to states but also to localities and their employees.⁵ Voluntary cooperation with a federal scheme does not present Tenth Amendment issues, but the federal government may not

United States*, 505 U.S. 144, 188 (1992) (federal government may not compel states to enact legislation providing for the disposal of their radioactive waste or else take title to that waste); Printz v. United States, 521 U.S. 898, 935 (1997) (federal government may not require state and local law enforcement officers to perform background checks on prospective firearm purchasers).

force state or local officials to carry out federal law, either directly or indirectly through the withdrawal of unrelated federal funding.⁶

The Tenth Amendment bars the federal government from requiring local law enforcement officials to enforce federal immigration law.

B. Federal Immigration Laws

1. Information Sharing Under 8 U.S.C. § 1373

Federal law does not require any local governmental agency or law enforcement officer to communicate with federal immigration authorities. Rather, federal law only requires that state and local governments not bar their employees from sharing certain types of information with federal immigration authorities. Specifically, 8 U.S.C. § 1373 provides that state and local governments cannot prohibit employees or entities “from sending to, or receiving from, [federal immigration authorities] information regarding the citizenship or immigration status, lawful or unlawful, of any individual.”⁷ In addition, state and local governments may not impose restrictions on “exchanging” information regarding “immigration status” with “any other Federal, State, or local government entity” or on “maintaining” such information.⁸

By its terms, 8 U.S.C. § 1373 applies only to information regarding an individual’s “citizenship” or “immigration status”; it does not apply to other types of information, such as information about an individual’s release, next court date, or address.⁹ In addition, § 1373 places no affirmative obligation on LEAs to collect information about an individual’s immigration status. Thus, local governments may adopt policies prohibiting their officers and employees from inquiring about a person’s immigration status except where required by law.

⁶ See Lomont v. O’Neill, 285 F.3d 9, 14 (D.C. Cir. 2002); see also Nat’l Fed. of Ind. Bus. v. Sebelius, 132 S. Ct. 2566, 2602 (2012).

⁷ 8 U.S.C. § 1373(a).

⁸ 8 U.S.C. § 1373(b).

⁹ As discussed below, the U.S. Department of Justice has indicated that it interprets § 1373 to preclude more than express restrictions on information disclosure. See infra, § C.

Finally, the Tenth Amendment, as discussed above, may further limit § 1373's reach. Although at least one court has held that § 1373 does not, on its face, violate that Amendment's anti-commandeering restrictions, the same court indicated that the Tenth Amendment may be read to limit the reach of § 1373 where a state or locality can show that the statute creates "an impermissible intrusion on state and local power to control information obtained in the course of official business or to regulate the duties and responsibilities of state and local governmental employees."¹⁰ The Tenth Amendment thus might protect local efforts to keep information confidential—even from the federal government—if such information is "essential to the performance of . . . state and local governmental functions" where those functions would be "difficult or impossible" to perform "if some expectation of confidentiality is not preserved."¹¹ If a local jurisdiction determines, therefore, that the sharing of information about citizenship or immigration status would make it "difficult or impossible" to perform essential governmental functions, the Tenth Amendment might justify a policy of not providing information under § 1373.

Update: Cases decided since this guidance was issued have called into question the constitutionality of § 1373. In May 2018, the Supreme Court decided Murphy v. N.C.A.A., in which it ruled that the anti-commandeering principle of the Tenth Amendment applies not only to federal efforts to compel state action, but also efforts to prohibit it. 138 S.Ct. 1461 (2018). Given that the Second Circuit in City of New York had drawn a distinction between compelling state action and prohibiting it in upholding the constitutionality of § 1373, see 179 F.3d at 35, the Supreme Court's rejection of that distinction as "empty," id. at 1478, suggests that the conclusion reached in City of New York may no longer be valid. At least three district courts have already reached that conclusion. See City of Chicago v. Sessions, 321 F. Supp. 3d 855, 872-73 (N.D. Ill. 2018); City of Philadelphia v. Sessions, 309 F. Supp. 3d 289, 330-31, 344 (E.D. Pa. 2018); New York et al. v. Department of Justice, 2018 WL 6257693, *14 (Nov. 30, 2018).

Federal law does not require local law enforcement to share with federal officials information about citizenship or immigration status. However, State and local officials may not prohibit such sharing unless maintaining confidentiality is necessary to perform state and local governmental functions.

2. Cooperation Agreements Under 8 U.S.C. § 1357(g)

Section 287(g) of the Immigration and Nationality Act—which is codified at 8 U.S.C. § 1357(g)—enables ICE to enter into agreements with state and local law enforcement agencies and authorize designated local officers to perform immigration-enforcement functions. After an agreement is signed, officers selected by the state or local agency receive federal training on how to access immigration databases, complete immigration forms, and otherwise carry out the functions of federal immigration agents. State and local law enforcement officials “deputized” through one of these agreements perform the same functions performed by federal immigration agents: they have access to federal immigration databases, may interrogate and take into custody noncitizens believed to have violated federal immigration laws, and may lodge “detainers” against alleged noncitizens held in state or local custody.¹²

A local law enforcement officer deputized under such an agreement functions as a federal officer and is treated as such for purposes of the Federal Tort Claims Act¹³ and worker’s compensation claims¹⁴ when performing functions under the agreement.¹⁵ In addition, authorized local personnel enjoy the same defenses and immunities from personal liability for their in-scope acts that are available to ICE officers,¹⁶ and may request—but are not entitled to—representation by the Department of Justice in any litigation arising from activities carried out under the agreement.¹⁷

With federal authority, however, come federal obligations. When local personnel act under federal authority, they must comply with a variety of different federal standards and guidelines. For example, deputized local officials must comply with the federal government’s rules governing the disclosure of impeachment information about potential witnesses.¹⁸ They also must comply with the federal Privacy Act of 1974 and associated regulations and guidelines regarding data collection and use of information.¹⁹

The decision to enter into a § 287(g) agreement is purely discretionary; local jurisdictions are not required to do so.²⁰ The federal government, while it encourages such agreements, does not reimburse local jurisdictions for the expenses their officers incur while assisting with federal immigration enforcement activities.²¹ And providing such assistance with officers who have only limited expertise and training in immigration

²⁰ There are a number of policy considerations that are outside the scope of this legal guidance but that jurisdictions might wish to consider before entering into these agreements. For example, the enforcement of federal immigration laws might divert resources from the investigation of local crimes. Formal participation in federal immigration enforcement—particularly by patrol officers—might also discourage immigrant communities from coming forward with information about criminal activity. There are a number of reports describing how the local enforcement of federal immigration law can affect police/community relations. See, e.g., American Immigration Council, “The 287(g) Program: An Overview” (Mar. 15, 2017); Nik Theodore, Department of Urban Planning and Policy, University of Illinois at Chicago, “Insecure Communities: Latino Perceptions of Police Involvement in Immigration Enforcement” (May 2013). In addition, these agreements might discourage immigrant communities from coming forward to testify in court. See Letter from Brian E. Frosh, Attorney General of Maryland, to the Hon. John Kelly, Secretary, Department of Homeland Security et al. (March 2, 2017), at www.marylandattorneygeneral.gov/News%20Documents/Homeland%20Security_Ltr_030117.pdf.

enforcement risks the type of racial profiling that is unconstitutional, as our Office stated in our 2015 guidance memorandum, “Ending Discriminatory Profiling in Maryland.”²²

Local law enforcement agencies may, but are not required to, enter into agreements deputizing their officers to exercise federal immigration enforcement powers. The federal government does not provide reimbursement for these agreements, and the agreements may increase the risk of unconstitutional profiling.

3. ICE Detainers Under 8 U.S.C. §§ 1226 and 1357 and 8 C.F.R. § 287.7

When ICE learns that a local law enforcement agency has custody of an individual who might be in the country illegally, it might issue what is commonly referred to as an “immigration detainer.” An immigration detainer advises local law enforcement that ICE is seeking custody of the individual and asks that the local agency hold the individual “for a period not to exceed 48 hours beyond the time when [the subject] would otherwise have been released” in order to allow ICE officials the opportunity to assume custody.²³ Immigration detainers are requests only; local officers are not obligated to honor them.²⁴

An LEA’s decision to comply with a detainer request and hold an individual beyond his or her normal release date constitutes a new “seizure.” That new seizure must be justified under the Fourth Amendment and the analogous provisions of Article 26 of the Maryland Declaration of Rights.²⁵ The requirements of the Fourth Amendment

Immigration detainers should not be confused with interstate criminal detainers subject to the Interstate Agreement on Detainers, which Maryland officials are obligated to fulfill. See generally Md. Code Ann., Corr. Serv. §§ 8-401 through 8-417.

do not change simply because ICE or CBP has issued a detainer request to an LEA.²⁶ Therefore, local officials who hold someone solely on the basis of having received a detainer request risk civil liability, including monetary damages and attorneys fees.²⁷

In August 2014, our Office issued an advice letter evaluating the extent to which immigration detainers issued on specific grounds might provide a local officer probable cause to detain someone beyond their State-law release date. That evaluation hinged on the “check-boxes” provided on the form used by ICE officials at the time and the extent to which information conveyed through those boxes provided probable cause to believe that the subject had committed a crime.²⁸

On March 24, 2017, ICE announced the introduction of a new form—Form I-247A—that officials must use effective April 2, 2017.²⁹ The new form and the guidance accompanying its introduction make two significant changes to the detainers and the process by which ICE officials issue them. First, the new immigration detainer form must now be accompanied by one of two administrative warrants: a Warrant for Arrest of Alien (Form I-200), or a Warrant for Removal/Deportation (Form I-205). According to the federal guidance, obtaining an administrative warrant will allow ICE officials to arrest undocumented individuals without having to make an individualized finding that the subject is “likely to escape,” as is required for warrantless arrests under federal immigration laws.³⁰ Second, the new immigration form eliminates the multiple check-boxes used on other forms—which described a wide variety of civil and criminal bases for continued detention—and replaces them with just four, each of which is focused purely on the subject’s unauthorized presence in the United States.

²⁶ See Orellana v. Nobles County, 2017 WL 72397, at *8 (D. Minn. Jan. 6, 2017) (stating that immigration detainers “do not categorically provide law enforcement a constitutionally permissible predicate for an arrest”); see also, e.g., Buquer v. City of Indianapolis, 2013 WL 1332158, at *8 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 28, 2013). In court filings, ICE has taken the contrary position that immigration detainers do provide probable cause for state officers to detain someone. See Brief of the United States as Amicus Curiae in Support of Neither Party, Massachusetts v. Lunn, No. SJC-12276 (Mass., filed March 27, 2017) (citing People v. Xirum, 45 Misc. 3d 785 (N.Y. Pugh*, 420 U.S. 103, 111-12 (1975) (discussing underlying basis of Fourth Amendment’s probable cause requirement). Liability will also depend, of course, on the applicability of other legal principles that govern the tort liability of State and local officials under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and the State and local tort claims acts. Those issues, however, are beyond the reach of this analysis.

As is discussed in greater detail in Appendix A, neither change alters our advice: Local officials may not hold someone beyond their State-law release date in the absence of a judicial warrant or probable cause that the subject has committed a crime. Although the issuance of an administrative warrant might authorize an arrest by a federal official or a local official operating under a § 287 agreement, it would not—by itself—authorize a continued detention under State law. The legality of a continued detention on the basis of a removal order is less clear; while there is some authority that removal orders justify local detentions, there is contrary authority as well.³¹ Given that uncertainty, detaining someone on the grounds that they are the subject of a removal order may result in liability for an unlawful seizure.

As for the check-boxes provided on the new form, none of them gives local officials probable cause to believe that a detainee has committed a crime. Instead, all four boxes relate to the subject’s unauthorized presence within the United States, which is a civil, not criminal, offense.³² And, as with the warrant issues discussed in the preceding paragraph, the case law is split as to whether an order for removal—the first of the four check-boxes—justifies a local detention.³³ For these reasons, we recommend that LEAs respond to immigration detainers only when they are accompanied by a judicial warrant, or when further inquiry gives the local official probable cause to believe that a crime—not merely a civil offense—has been committed. Only under those circumstances will a local official have a clear legal basis to hold a detainee beyond his or her State-law release date.³⁴

Local law enforcement officials face potential liability if they honor ICE detainers and hold someone beyond their State-law release date unless the detainer is accompanied by a judicial warrant or when the information provided with the detainer form establishes probable cause to believe that the detainee has committed a crime. Illegal presence in the United States is a civil offense and does not provide a clear basis for continued detention.

C. Executive Order No. 13768, “Enhancing Public Safety in the Interior of the United States”

On January 25, 2017, the President of the United States issued Executive Order No. 13768 for the purpose of guiding the actions of federal agencies involved in immigration enforcement. On February 20, 2017, DHS published a memorandum implementing the Executive Order.³⁵ Together, these materials raise additional issues about the local enforcement of federal immigration law.³⁶

³³ See Appendix A at A-2.

³⁶ Several jurisdictions have challenged the constitutionality of the executive order and, in one case, the court has issued a nationwide injunction blocking its implementation. See County

The Executive Order and the DHS Memorandum both state that the federal government will seek increased cooperation from state and local governments in connection with immigration enforcement.³⁷ Both documents also address the § 1373 information-sharing provisions and the 287(g) agreements discussed above. Although neither document may legally alter federal statutory law on those topics, they provide some insight into how broadly the federal government construes those laws.

The Executive Order takes aim at so-called “sanctuary jurisdictions,” which it describes as “jurisdictions that willfully refuse to comply with 8 U.S.C. § 1373.”³⁸ The Order grants the U.S. Attorney General and the DHS Secretary authority to (1) designate localities as “sanctuary jurisdictions,” and (2) ensure that jurisdictions so designated are ineligible for federal grants, “except as deemed necessary for law enforcement purposes.”³⁹ The Executive Order further directs the U.S. Attorney General to take “appropriate enforcement action” against any jurisdiction that either violates § 1373 or “has in effect a statute, policy, or practice that prevents or hinders the enforcement of Federal law.”⁴⁰

As discussed above, § 1373 relates only to sharing “information” regarding “citizenship or immigration status”; it does not restrict a locality from declining to share with federal immigration officials other types of information, such as non-public information about an individual’s release, next court date, or address. Nor does § 1373 place an affirmative obligation on local governments to collect information about an individual’s immigration status. An LEA that chooses not to share additional information with federal officials should not run afoul of § 1373 so long as its practices do not prohibit employees from sharing information regarding citizenship or immigration status.

Federal officials have, however, interpreted § 1373 broadly to include not only local rules that restrict the sharing of information about citizenship or immigration status, but any law, rule, or “practice” that has the effect of restricting that sharing. The Executive Order itself directs the U.S. Attorney General to take “appropriate enforcement action” against any jurisdiction that “has in effect a statute, policy, or practice that prevents or hinders the enforcement of Federal law”⁴¹—a standard that seems to go beyond the narrow information-sharing that § 1373 is designed to protect. The federal government has also stated that a local policy prohibiting law enforcement officials from honoring detainer requests—which are not covered by § 1373—might qualify as a violation of § 1373,⁴² particularly if it causes local officials to believe that all types of cooperation with federal immigration officials are prohibited.⁴³

Local jurisdictions would be understandably concerned about the possible loss of federal funding if the U.S. Attorney General were to find that they have violated § 1373 under one of these federal interpretations. The federal government provides Maryland and its local jurisdictions with numerous grants in areas ranging from education and health care to social services and criminal justice, and the loss of federal funding could have significant consequences. Each grant is governed by different regulatory schemes, however, and the specific provisions of those schemes must be reviewed to determine whether they might restrict the federal government’s ability to withhold funding.

Still, there are certain actions that an LEA can take without risking the loss of federal funding. A local jurisdiction’s decision not to enter into a § 287(g) agreement cannot be considered a violation of § 1373.⁴⁴ And a local rule, policy, or practice of not cooperating with federal immigration authorities should not violate even the federal government's view of § 1373 if the local government does not restrict its employees from responding to federal requests for information about a person's citizenship or immigration status.

Finally, although the federal government has wide latitude to condition its funding to states and localities on their fulfillment of certain conditions, the U.S. Supreme Court has identified limitations on that authority. First, the power to impose funding conditions under the Spending Clause lies with Congress, not the President or the federal agencies he oversees.⁴⁵ Second, Congress cannot use its spending power "to induce the States to engage in activities that would themselves be unconstitutional."⁴⁶ The federal government thus cannot condition a grant of federal funds on invidiously discriminatory state action, and likely cannot withdraw funds from a state that declines to fulfill detainers that would violate the Fourth Amendment. Third, any funding conditions must be reasonably related to the federal interest in the program at issue.⁴⁷ For this reason, the federal government likely cannot withdraw from so-called "sanctuary jurisdictions" federal funding that is not related to the enforcement of federal immigration laws. Fourth, the funding condition must be stated "unambiguously" so that the recipient can "voluntarily and knowingly" decide whether to accept those funds and the associated requirements.⁴⁸ Accordingly, the federal government may not be able to withdraw federal funding on the basis of an expansive reading of the states' obligations under § 1373. And finally, the amount of federal funding that a noncomplying State would forfeit cannot be so large that the State would be left with “no real option but to acquiesce” and accept the condition⁴⁹—a limitation that would be implicated should the federal government seek to withdraw all federal funding from a jurisdiction. Depending on the amount and nature of any federal funding cut, states and localities may be able to challenge the defunding on one or more of these grounds.⁵⁰

Update: Several cases decided since this guidance was issued have invalidated the federal government's imposition of immigration-related conditions on the states' receipt of law-enforcement grant-funding. See, e.g., City of Chicago v. Sessions, 264 F. Supp. 3d 933, 943 (N.D. Ill. 2017), aff'd 888 F.3d 272 (7th Cir. 2018) (Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant Program funding); City of Philadelphia v. Sessions, 309 F. Supp. 3d 289, 323-24 (E.D. Pa. 2018) (same); New York et al. v. Department of Justice, 2018 WL 6257693, *10 (Nov. 30, 2018) (same); City of Los Angeles v. Sessions, 293 F. Supp. 3d 1087, 1098-99 (C.D. Cal. 2018) (community-oriented policing funding).

Although Executive Order No. 13768 threatens local jurisdictions with the loss of federal funds if they “hinder” federal immigration enforcement, local jurisdictions remain free not to enter into § 287(g) agreements or share information with federal immigration officials so long as they do not restrict employees from sharing with federal officials information about a person’s citizenship or immigration status.

⁵⁰ The Northern District of California, in enjoining the effect of the executive order, concluded that the plaintiff counties were likely to succeed not only on their claims that the executive order violates the Spending Clause and the Tenth Amendment, but also on their claims that the order is vague and fails to comport with the due process principles of the Fifth Amendment. See County of Santa Clara v. Trump, No. 17-CV-00485-WHO, 2017 WL 1459081, at *24-26.

CONCLUSION

Much has changed since 2014, when our Office last provided advice on the local enforcement of federal immigration laws. Some changes have come through the courts, which continue to review the legality of local detentions on the basis of immigration detainers. Other changes have come through federal immigration enforcement policy, which is only now becoming subject to judicial review. These changes have created considerable legal uncertainty surrounding the local participation in the enforcement of federal immigration laws.

In light of this uncertainty, this guidance recommends a few basic principles to guide local law enforcement agencies as they interact with federal immigration law and officials:

1. LEAs face potential liability exposure if they seek to enforce federal immigration laws, particularly if they do so outside the context of a federal cooperation agreement under 8 U.S.C. § 1357(g)(1).
2. LEAs must absorb all costs associated with federal cooperation agreements under 8 U.S.C. § 1357(g)(1). The federal government does not provide reimbursement for these agreements, and the agreements may increase the risk of unconstitutional profiling.
3. LEAs face potential liability exposure if they honor ICE or CBP detainer requests unless the request is accompanied by a judicial warrant or supported by information providing probable cause that the subject of the detainer has committed a crime.
4. State and local officers may not be prohibited from sharing information about a detainee's citizenship or immigration status with federal immigration officials, but they are not required to do so either.
5. As an overriding principle, the government bears the burden of proving that the detention of someone beyond the person's State-law release date does not violate the Fourth Amendment and its Maryland counterpart.

Following these principles will allow law enforcement agencies to comply with federal law in a manner that respects the constitutional rights of individuals, protects local agencies and officials from potential legal liability, and allows them to remain faithful to their mission of promoting public safety.

APPENDIX A

The extent to which an immigration detainer authorizes a local official to detain someone beyond his or her State-law release date depends on what information is provided with the detainer form. In an August 2014 advice letter, our Office evaluated the extent to which the specific “check-boxes” provided on the form used by ICE officials at the time provided probable cause to believe that the subject had committed a crime.¹ On March 24, 2017, ICE announced that it would use a new form—Form I-247A—as of April 2, 2017.²

Form I-247A

The new detainer form is different from its predecessors in two significant ways: (1) the form must now be accompanied by either a Warrant for Arrest of Alien (Form I-200), or a Warrant for Removal/Deportation (Form I-205); and (2) the new form eliminates the multiple check-boxes used on previous forms—which described a wide variety and civil and criminal bases for continued detention—and replaces them with just four, each of which is focused purely on the subject’s unauthorized presence in the United States.³ We address the two developments separately.

1. Administrative Warrants

Like all administrative warrants, the two that may accompany the new immigration detainers are not reviewed or issued by a court or judicial officer. Instead, an ICE official issues them for the purpose of authorizing other ICE officials—or local officials operating under a § 287(g) agreement—to take a suspect into custody.⁴ The Warrant for Arrest of Alien (Form I-200) is issued for the purpose of bringing someone before an administrative tribunal to determine whether he or she is subject to removal or deportation.⁵ It is issued prior to adjudication of the individual’s lawful status. A

Warrant for Removal/Deportation (Form I-205), by contrast, is issued after an adjudicative inquiry has already resulted in the issuance of an order of removal or deportation.⁶

The courts have reached mixed conclusions about the effect of these types of warrants. At least one court has held that a final order of deportation or removal—which generates the issuance of the Form I-205 Warrant for Removal/Deportation—provides “lawful authority” for local officials to detain the subject of the order.⁷ The same court, however, suggested the opposite in a subsequent case,⁸ and other courts have held more generally that arrests made pursuant to administrative immigration warrants must be treated as warrantless for purposes of state tort law and federal constitutional claims.⁹

Without settled law on whether a local officer may lawfully arrest an individual solely on the basis of an order of deportation or removal, we cannot assure local officers that such an arrest would not give rise to potential liability. Two reasons lie behind this conclusion. First, under federal immigration law, only a federally-authorized ICE agent is permitted to execute an administrative ICE warrant.¹⁰ State and local officials

⁶ See 8 C.F.R. § 241.2 (stating that a warrant for removal is “based upon the final administrative removal order in the alien’s case”).

⁷ See People v. Xirum, 45 Misc.3d 785, 789 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. 2014). Two other courts have suggested that it might have been reasonable for a local official to believe he had probable cause to detain someone who had been “subject to a warrant for arrest or order of removal or deportation by ICE,” but neither included that within its holding. See Miranda-Olivares, No. 3:12-CV-02317-ST, 2014 WL 1414305, at *11; see also Santos v. Frederick County Bd. of Comm’rs, 725 F.3d 451, 458, 466 (4th Cir. 2013) (suggesting that an active, “outstanding ICE warrant for ‘immediate deportation’” would have been sufficient to justify an arrest if the local officer had learned that the warrant was active before he had made the arrest).

⁸ See People ex rel. Swenson v. Ponte, 46 Misc. 3d 273, 278 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. 2014) (“There is no allegation that the Department has actually obtained a removal order and, if in fact they had, there is still no authority for a local correction commissioner to detain someone based upon a civil determination, as immigration removal orders are civil, not criminal, in nature.”).

¹⁰ See 8 U.S.C. § 1357(g)(1); 8 C.F.R. § 287.5(e); see also Santos, 725 F.3d at 463-64.

operating outside of a § 287(g) agreement have no such authority. Second, the underlying infraction for which the warrants are issued—being in the country illegally—is typically a civil infraction, which cannot justify a State-law arrest. For these reasons, we continue to recommend that local officials who receive a detainer accompanied by an administrative warrant not hold someone beyond their State-law release date in the absence of probable cause to believe that the subject has committed a crime.

Although neither warrant itself provides such probable cause, further inquiry into the circumstances justifying the issuance of the warrant might. Removal orders can be issued on several different grounds, including that the person has committed one of several categories of criminal offenses.¹¹ If a local official contacts ICE officials and learns that the individual is subject to removal for having committed a crime, that inquiry might provide a local official probable cause to detain the individual beyond his or her State-law release date. Although that type of additional inquiry could provide probable cause based on either type of warrant, it is more likely to do so when ICE has issued a Warrant for Removal/Deportation (Form I-205), which is issued after an adjudicative inquiry has already established grounds for removal.

It is important to remember that federal law does not require a local official to engage in this type of additional inquiry. Immigration detainers are voluntary requests only and the decision not to honor them does not violate federal law, at least as long as local officials remain free to communicate with federal immigration agents about a subject's citizenship or immigration status.

2. Check-Boxes

There are two sets of check-boxes on the new form, only one of which provides any information about the grounds on which the detainer is being issued.¹² The first set, which appears at the top of the page, states:

¹¹ See 8 U.S.C. § 1227(a)(2).

¹² The form includes a second option for DHS to use when it originally transferred someone to an LEA for a local proceeding or investigation and is seeking to have custody over the subject returned. That option does not, however, provide any information that would bear on whether a local official has probable cause to detain someone beyond their State-law release date and we thus do not address it further.

DHS HAS DETERMINED THAT PROBABLE CAUSE EXISTS THAT THE SUBJECT IS A REMOVABLE ALIEN. THIS DETERMINATION IS BASED ON:

- ☐ a final order of removal against the alien;
- ☐ the pendency of ongoing removal proceedings against the alien;
- ☐ biometric confirmation of the alien's identity and a records check of federal databases that affirmatively indicate, by themselves or in addition to other reliable information, that the alien either lacks immigration status or notwithstanding such status is removable under U.S. immigration law; and/or
- ☐ statements made by the alien to an immigration officer and/or other reliable evidence that affirmatively indicate the alien either lacks immigration status or notwithstanding such status is removable under U.S. immigration law.

The last two, lengthy check-boxes plainly do not provide probable cause for a local official to believe that the subject has committed a crime. Both relate only to the subject's unauthorized presence within the United States, which the Supreme Court has made clear is a civil, not criminal, offense.¹³ The second check-box—the pendency of ongoing removal proceedings against the alien—likewise does not establish probable cause. That removal proceedings are pending against someone does not mean that the individual has been adjudicated to be in the country illegally. At most, it indicates that the individual has been charged with immigration violations based on allegations made by ICE officials. The Supreme Court has made clear that a “Notice to Appear” form—which also signifies pending removal proceedings—“does not authorize an arrest.”¹⁴ That principle applies here, particularly if the underlying violation is illegal presence within the country, which is a civil infraction.

The first check-box—a final order of removal against the alien—presents a closer call. As discussed above with respect to the Warrant for Removal/Deportation (Form I-205), at least one court has held that the issuance of a final order of removal provides

“lawful authority” for local officials to detain the subject of the order.¹⁵ To some extent, the legality of a local arrest based solely on an order of removal might depend on what type of order has been issued. Federal immigration law provides for different types of removal orders, some issued by immigration judges, others by the U.S. Attorney General.¹⁶ It might also depend on what lies behind a specific order. Generally speaking, a removal order indicates only that an individual is in the country illegally and is subject to deportation. Again, because a removal order is a civil order, not a criminal finding, it is less likely to provide the basis for a lawful local arrest. But if the removal order is issued in response to criminal activity, it might justify a local detention if the LEA learns of that criminal activity before fulfilling the detainer.¹⁷

In the absence of a clear judicial consensus that a local officer is authorized to make an arrest on the basis of an order of deportation or removal, we recommend that LEAs respond to detainers issued on this basis only when they are accompanied by a judicial warrant or when additional inquiry gives probable cause to believe a crime has been committed.

¹⁵ See supra at A-2; see also People v. Xirum, 45 Misc.3d 785, 789 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. 2014); but see People ex rel. Swenson v. Ponte, 46 Misc. 3d 273, 278 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2014).

NOTICE TO THE DETAINEE

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) has placed an immigration detainer on you. An immigration detainer is a notice to a law enforcement agency that DHS intends to assume custody of you (after you otherwise would be released from custody) because there is probable cause that you are subject to removal from the United States under federal immigration law. DHS has requested that the law enforcement agency that is currently detaining you maintain custody of you for a period not to exceed 48 hours beyond the time when you would have been released based on your criminal charges or convictions. If DHS does not take you into custody during this additional 48 hour period, you should contact your custodian (the agency that is holding you now) to inquire about your release. If you believe you are a United States citizen or the victim of a crime, please advise DHS by calling the ICE Law Enforcement Support Center toll free at (855) 448-6903.

NOTIFICACIÓN A LA PERSONA DETENIDA

El Departamento de Seguridad Nacional (DHS) le ha puesto una retención de inmigración. Una retención de inmigración es un aviso a una agencia de la ley que DHS tiene la intención de asumir la custodia de usted (después de lo contrario, usted sería puesto en libertad de la custodia) porque hay causa probable que usted está sujeto a que lo expulsen de los Estados Unidos bajo la ley de inmigración federal. DHS ha solicitado que la agencia de la ley que le tiene detenido actualmente mantenga custodia de usted por un periodo de tiempo que no exceda de 48 horas más del tiempo original que habría sido puesto en libertad en base a los cargos judiciales o a sus antecedentes penales. Si DHS no le pone en custodia durante este periodo adicional de 48 horas, usted debe de contactarse con su custodio (la agencia que le tiene detenido en este momento) para preguntar acerca de su liberación. Si usted cree que es un ciudadano de los Estados Unidos o la víctima de un crimen, por favor avise al DHS llamando gratuitamente al Centro de Apoyo a la Aplicación de la Ley ICE al (855) 448-6903.

AVIS AU DETENU OU À LA DÉTENUE

Le Département de la Sécurité Intérieure (DHS) a placé un dépositaire d'immigration sur vous. Un dépositaire d'immigration est un avis à une agence de force de l'ordre que le DHS a l'intention de vous prendre en garde à vue (après cela vous pourrez par ailleurs être remis en liberté) parce qu'il y a une cause probable que vous soyez sujet à expulsion des États-Unis en vertu de la loi fédérale sur l'immigration. Le DHS a demandé que l'agence de force de l'ordre qui vous détient actuellement puisse vous maintenir en garde pendant une période ne devant pas dépasser 48 heures au-delà du temps après lequel vous auriez été libéré en se basant sur vos accusations criminelles ou condamnations. Si le DHS ne vous prenne pas en garde à vue au cours de cette période supplémentaire de 48 heures, vous devez contacter votre gardien (ne) (l'agence qui vous détient maintenant) pour vous renseigner sur votre libération. Si vous croyez que vous êtes un citoyen ou une citoyenne des États-Unis ou une victime d'un crime, s'il vous plaît aviser le DHS en appelant gratuitement le centre d'assistance de force de l'ordre de l'ICE au (855) 448-6903
