Attorney General Frosh's Statement Following Supreme Court Decision in West Virginia v EPA

BALTIMORE, MD (June 30, 2022) – Maryland Attorney General Brian E. Frosh today issued the following statement following the Supreme Court's decision in West Virginia v EPA:

"Today's decision turns away from the climate crisis just when we should be addressing it head-on. Despite the Court's decision in this case, Maryland will continue to do its part to limit greenhouse gas and other emissions that harm our environment and health, and we'll keep working to ensure that the EPA can use the full scope of its authority to do the same. We must continue to fight climate change, and end our nation's destructive reliance on fossil fuels, to ensure a safer environment for all."
